

DAVID PALEOLOGOS is the Director of the SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY POLITICAL RESEARCH CENTER (SUPRC), where he has worked since 2002 conducting polling at the local, state, and national level. SUPRC results have been reported on by hundreds of major news organizations for their high degree of accuracy.

As of summer 2022, Paleologos and SUPRC are partnered with The Boston Globe (regional polling) and USA TODAY (national polling). Other survey partners include: The Salt Lake Tribune (Utah); The Cincinnati Enquirer (Ohio); The York Daily Record (Pennsylvania); The Reno

Gazette Journal (Nevada); The Arizona Republic (Arizona); The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel (Wisconsin); The Detroit Free Press (Michigan); The Louisville Courier Journal (Kentucky); and NBC10 Boston-Telemundo-NECN. SUPRC's unique projects include surveys of unlikely/unregistered voters in 2012 and 2018, as well as the CityView project, a series of polls in diverse American cities on policing, reform, and other community issues. In March 2022 SUPRC polled residents of the US who identify with Russian and Ukrainian heritage, and in June 2022 surveyed Americans on their opinions on abortion, both for USA TODAY. Paleologos is the author of a proprietary bellwether model that has an 89% record of accuracy in predicting outcomes through March 2020's Super Tuesday primaries.

In the 2020 November presidential election Suffolk polling was a perfect 6 for 6, including correct calls in Arizona, Florida, Minnesota, New Hampshire, and Pennsylvania, and a national poll taken within the final five weeks of the election. In a survey taken one week before the September 2021 Boston mayoral preliminary election, SUPRC reported Michelle Wu taking 31% of the vote and Anissa Essaibi George taking 19%; the actual results were Wu 33%, George 22%.

In addition to his duties as SUPRC Director, Paleologos is a lecturer in the Suffolk University Department of Political Science & Legal Studies, where he teaches Political Survey Research. In this intensive course, students create, implement, and analyze their own poll, and over the course of the semester interact with experts from the field. Before beginning his career in academia, Paleologos was one of the Bay State's most sought-after field operatives; he is the president and CEO of DAPA Research Inc. He frequently appears as a media analyst and serves as a guest lecturer and speaker at many New England schools and institutions. A graduate of Tufts University, Paleologos is a member of the American Association of Public Opinion Researchers and the Northeast Political Consultants Association.
